

WE DECIDE

What is served, when, and where.

SHE DECIDES

Whether she eats, and how much.

The six rules

- 1 3 meals + 2 snacks, every 2.5–3 hrs. Water only between.
- 2 No grazing. Milk with meals, ~16 oz a day max.
- 3 Family style. Bowls on the table; she serves herself.
- 4 One safe food on every plate — part of the meal, not a rescue.
- 5 No short-order cooking. One meal for everyone.
- 6 Say nothing about her eating. Good or bad.

DO

- + Describe — “crunchy and sweet” — don’t sell it.
- + Eat it yourself, visibly, with enjoyment.
- + Accept “no” the first time.
- + Let her spit it out. Escape routes make trying safe.
- + Serve a one-bite portion next to a favorite.
- + End at ~20 minutes, calmly.

DON'T

- No dessert as payment.
- No praise for eating. It makes food a performance.
- No negotiating bites.
- No backup meal.
- No hiding veg as the main plan.
- Don't let one rough meal change anything.

Bridges from what she already loves

Cottage cheese → ricotta → soft egg curds → scrambled egg → egg salad

Pizza sauce → marinara dip → tomato soup → roasted tomato → raw

Veg: roasted sweet potato → carrot → broccoli → peas → raw

Pizza → minced pepperoni → meatball → chicken meatball → cut chicken

Peanut butter → on crackers → on apple → as a dip → hummus

Fruit: applesauce → cooked apple → raw; freeze-dried berry → fresh

Progress — every step counts

on the table → on her plate → touches it → smells it → licks it → spits it out → one bite → eats it

CALL THE PEDIATRICIAN IF

Fewer than ~20 accepted foods or the list is shrinking · a whole food group or texture refused · gagging, choking, or vomiting at meals · pocketing food · weight loss or falling off her growth curve · panic at the sight of food · signs of reflux, constipation, or pain. Ask for a pediatric feeding therapist (SLP or OT). Early help is short help.

It takes 10–15 tries. Count how often we serve it — not how much she eats.

Ellyn Satter's Division of Responsibility · food chaining
General guidance, not medical advice